part of it is that the recognition comes too late. Stubblefield, probably the first man who ever transplanted the human voice without wires, died in poverty, cheated of his prize and the comforts it should have brought him. It is proper that honor be paid this man, even though his praises have heretofore gone unused. Murray and Calloway county do well to perpetuate his memory. They have fittingly honored a man whose genius is now recognized.—Paducah Sun-Democrat.

Boy Scout Notes

Attention is called to the fact that we do not meet on Thursday night as has been our custom. The regular meeting will be on Friday night at 7:30.

The Drum and Bugle corps met for practice last Tuesday night which was the first practice we have had for two or three months.

The Boy Scout organization and especially the Drum and Bugle corps hope to have some flashy capes for our corps before long.

Four patrols were in a patrol contest Saturday, March 15. The Panther patrol, of which Scout James Holcomb is patrol leader and Scout Eugene Outland assistant patrol leader, won the contest.

This winning patrol will be awarded a Patrol Flag bearing the emblem of their patrol.

Remember that camping time will soon be here. Check up on your uniform and equipment so you will be ready to go out into the open country when the call comes.

Patrol leaders are expected to remind all members of the meeting and registration fees. Remember we want to have a big birthday party when we receive our new charter and registration certificates.

Roy A. Weatherly, Scout Master.

Sylvia Dell Page, 14, is called in Detroit.

Sylvia Dell, the 14 years old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Page, died Friday morning at the home of her parents in Detroit after a long illness of diabetes.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Page are former residents of Calloway county.

Besides her parents, she leaves three sisters and one brother.

The little girl was a member of the Martin's Chapel Methodist Without Question...

Your children never question your judgment as to the quality of the food you give them. It is YOUR responsibility to know that the milk they drink is pure and safe. Milk is the most easily contaminated of any food. Even with the most complete care in handling, milk cannot be made safe without pasteurization.

All the milk that we pasteurize comes only from dairies that use utmost care in handling their milk. Then we pasteurize it as an added protection to you and your children.

We, too, share with you a keen sense of responsibility for the quality of the milk that your children drink.

That is why we are so careful to produce of the city ranked the unfortunate Kentucky man with inventors of the world.

A spirit of tribute dominated the large audience which came officially to recognize the glory and honor that for almost 30 years had belonged to Nathan Stubblefield.

The holiday spirit of the day was tempered with the more solemn atmosphere of the well-illuminated ball, and a reverent attitude pervaded the thoughts of those present.

"Some men live too soon," was the explanation of President Stanley T. Wells in respect to the pathetic and ironic fate of Stubblefield.

"One of the most cultured, sincere and honest families that ever settled a commonwealth," was the comment of the president about the Stubblefield family.

"You have honored yourself in recognizing this genius. A community able to realize and appreciate a man extraordinary in intelligence and capable to think of something no one else had ever thought of, is a community worth while," was eulogy of the college head.

That men of unusual capacity were not interested in frivolities of life was set forth by the speaker, as he told of the misadventure of something that else had ever thought of, is a community worth while," was eulogy of the college head.

Referring to Stubblefield as the first man to know of wireless telephony, the former friend of the inventor, admitted that the community had failed to take advantage of an unusual piece of work.

"A man of the world," a scientist of the world, and "one who found something of which no one else knew," were tributes to the inventor.

"A young man from Illinois,"

The intimate details of the life of a mysterious genius as observed by a family physician in 30 years practice were revealed by Dr. W. H. Mason, prominent Murray surgeon, in the concluding address of the morning.

The cars which Stubblefield gave his children when they were ill, the instructions which he followed to the letter in nursing them back to health were points given by the physician in proof that the genius was thoughtful of his family.

The difficulty of understanding a father who worked eternally at his peculiar box, would not allow his children to be with other chil-

Prof. L. J. Horton, had to come to our community and discover the truth about this man," explained the Murray president.

The first work to establish the claim of a great man to his rightful place in the halls of fame was begun by a Journalism professor. Two years of work with the aid of his class, and the spread of the idea through the Exchange and Rotary Clubs of the city through out the city. This growth of a movement was all outlined by President Wells.

Stating in a plain and simple manner the elements of greatness, the progress of the world in science, the place due Nathan Stubblefield and the reasons why he did not receive honor while he was living, Judge W. A. Berry of Paducah gave the main address of the morning.

Two types of great men were characterized by the judge. The first type is the man who gets in the limelight and receives his honor or while living. The other is the man who does not have opportunity, whose environment did not allow him to get proper recognition for the work which would blazon his name on the roll of fame.

Saying that if the claims made for Stubblefield be true, Judge Berry ranked the Kentucky inventor above Marconi in scientific work.

"Nathan Stubblefield must have been inspired. God must have placed in him the fire of genius which comes to but few in the world."

The sad thing about this man is that having conceived of the conquerable, he died without the benefits of his invention," the attorney explained.

"Pioneers seldom benefit from their own endeavors. The honor goes to those who did not fight the battles. Here today we come to honor the man who did not fight the battles. He honored us by the fact that he was outstanding in his line of endeavor," concluded the Paducah lawyer.

Elbow & Make Address

Mayor Ed Pilbeck gave an interesting picture of the advancement of science. The many inventions of the world and their effect on mankind were told.

"God created laws, facts and truths with the universe. But it takes a man to discover them and put them into force."

It took a Nathan Stubblefield to create a radio and find its principles. It is fitting that we should meet here today and honor him.

"Sweeping aside the curtain of the future, Stubblefield, the prophet, saw the enjoyment which his invention would bring. Calloway County has produced illustrious financiers, educators and statesmen. With them stands one of the greatest of the country. One of the outstanding inventors of the world," the mayor concluded.

"You have honored yourself in recognizing this genius. A community able to realize and appreciate a man extraordinary in intelligence and capable to think of something no one else had ever thought of, is a community worth while," was eulogy of the college head.

That men of unusual capacity were not interested in frivolities of life was set forth by the speaker, as he told of the misadventure of something that else had ever thought of, is a community worth while," was eulogy of the college head.

Referring to Stubblefield as the first man to know of wireless telephony, the former friend of the inventor, admitted that the community had failed to take advantage of an unusual piece of work.

"A man of the world," a scientist of the world, and "one who found something of which no one else knew," were tributes to the inventor.

The intimate details of the life of a mysterious genius as observed by a family physician in 30 years practice were revealed by Dr. W. H. Mason, prominent Murray surgeon, in the concluding address of the morning.

The cars which Stubblefield gave his children when they were ill, the instructions which he followed to the letter in nursing them back to health were points given by the physician in proof that the genius was thoughtful of his family.

The difficulty of understanding a father who worked eternally at his peculiar box, would not allow his children to be with other chil-

Prof. L. J. Horton, had to come to our community and discover the truth about this man," explained the Murray president.

The first work to establish the claim of a great man to his rightful place in the halls of fame was begun by a Journalism professor. Two years of work with the aid of his class, and the spread of the idea through the Exchange and Rotary Clubs of the city through out the city. This growth of a movement was all outlined by President Wells.

Stating in a plain and simple manner the elements of greatness, the progress of the world in science, the place due Nathan Stubblefield and the reasons why he did not receive honor while he was living, Judge W. A. Berry of Paducah gave the main address of the morning.

Two types of great men were characterized by the judge. The first type is the man who gets in the limelight and receives his honor or while living. The other is the man who does not have opportunity, whose environment did not allow him to get proper recognition for the work which would blazon his name on the roll of fame.

Saying that if the claims made for Stubblefield be true, Judge Berry ranked the Kentucky inventor above Marconi in scientific work.

"Nathan Stubblefield must have been inspired. God must have placed in him the fire of genius which comes to but few in the world."

The sad thing about this man is that having conceived of the conquerable, he died without the benefits of his invention," the attorney explained.

"Pioneers seldom benefit from their own endeavors. The honor goes to those who did not fight the battles. Here today we come to honor the man who did not fight the battles. He honored us by the fact that he was outstanding in his line of endeavor," concluded the Paducah lawyer.

Elbow & Make Address

Mayor Ed Pilbeck gave an interesting picture of the advancement of science. The many inventions of the world and their effect on mankind were told.

"God created laws, facts and truths with the universe. But it takes a man to discover them and put them into force."

It took a Nathan Stubblefield to create a radio and find its principles. It is fitting that we should meet here today and honor him.

"Sweeping aside the curtain of the future, Stubblefield, the prophet, saw the enjoyment which his invention would bring. Calloway County has produced illustrious financiers, educators and statesmen. With them stands one of the greatest of the country. One of the outstanding inventors of the world," the mayor concluded.

Early Decision Desired
Now we have two State Highway Commissions. The state awaits the result of the court battle that will settle the question: Which is the real Highway Commission?

An early final decision in the suit to test the constitutionality of the road law which abolished one commission and created another is needed.
Work should begin in April. There can be no day-dreaming among Kentuckians whose road projects are on the waiting list until the way is cleared for action by the new commission or action by the old commission.

The public does not view the situation from the angle of politics so much as from the angle of public welfare. The public wants road making to proceed.

Recognition of the fact will, beyond a reasonable doubt, animate courts and motivate proceedings. The dear forecast of a long period spent in threshing out the case hardly seemed warranted, when during the Legislature, it was made by champions of the regime against which the guns of the opposition were thundering.—Louisville Times.

Snook and Winslow On College Board
Frankfort, Ky., April 1.—Gov. Flem D. Sampson today appointed Claude T. Winslow, Mayfield, and S. J. Snook, Paducah, members of the board of regents of Murray State Teachers College, Murray, for terms ending April 1, 1934. They succeed J. T. Wilson, Mayfield, and G. P. Thomas, Geddes.

Columbus National Park Movement Is Under Way
Much work has been made within the past few days on the National Park to be established near Columbus, Ky., where the United States Government came within an acre of establishing the west of National Government at the beginning of the nineteenth century.

The committee in charge has already begun to buy land for the park area and it is announced that daily from individuals and firms the Hickman county fiscal court throughout western Kentucky, has appropriated $100,000 toward the establishment of the park project.

Subscriptions are being received for work in Calloway county.
